

From....THE HAT LADY!

It's the end of the week and we'all (plural of y'all – synonymous with us'ns) hope everyone enjoyed the tournament. St. Louis, despite its unfortunate northern location, has an unerring ability to make guests feel welcome. There are many cultural and enjoyable things to do in St. Louis, but it's too hot to do any of them – so just be glad you had bridge to occupy your time!

We, in bridge, know how important it is to welcome new players; but the line should be drawn, especially at the tournament level, where ignorance of the basic rules cannot be tolerated. The Hat Lady really upset an opponent by calling the director, more than once, because face down leads, skip bid warnings and alerts were ignored, omitted and misused. The opponents were new to the game but presumably members of the ACBL and playing in a regional tournament, so there really is no excuse for not knowing the basics. And, becoming unglued when this was pointed out, didn't change the facts. You cannot walk into the Masters wearing tennis shoes. Or ride in the Kentucky Derby wearing spurs. Everyone needs to know the basic framework of the game.

On a lighter note, in case you are ever blindfolded and dropped here, you will know it is St. Louis in the summer if.....

- The hot and cold water from the tap are the same temperature.
- You can drive for miles and not see one open window on any car, truck, bus, house, garage, chicken coop, outhouse or doghouse.
- There is roadwork on every road but two – but no one knows where those two are.
- The biggest traffic jam of the week is Friday evening on all roads heading out of town.
- Kids would rather go to church in the AC than to Six Flags in the heat.
- Pools are so crowded it's like swimming in warm people soup.
- People are grilling pork steaks. (Pork steaks are about 96% fat and burn with the heat of a small sun.) Non-natives have no idea what a pork steak is. Neither do natives, but we eat them in great quantities every summer.
- House fires start because people pulled the grill up to the window so they didn't have to go outside to turn the pork steaks. Some St. Louisans are smarter than others.

Y'all play nice now and we'll see you here next year.
